

AMERICAN

"Put none but Americans on guard.""Not for self, but for others."

Volume 1

BOULDER, COLORADO, JUNE 9, 1925

Number 18

Mammoth Klan Parade in Longmont Followed by Initiating Big Class

ON Tuesday night Longmont Klan was host to visiting Klansmen and Klanswomen from all over Northern Colorado. Large delegations began to arrive early in the evening and gathered at the big open space just south of the city, to participate in the biggest and best parade and ceremonial ever held here. The line formed at 8 o'clock, was preceded by officers on horseback, and marched four abreast. The scene was most impressive, as the procession, nearly half mile in length of robed Klansmen marched silently up through the main streets of the city. Thousands of spectators who had come from many other towns in autos lined both sides of the street, and standing at attention, showed their respect and admiration for the valiant Knights of the Ku Klux Klan as they marched silently by and in perfect order.

"Onward Christian soldiers, Marching as to war."

The staunch, true, loyal Americans who have taken up the torch of patriotism, and pledged to hold it high to enlighten others in his country as to what real Americanism and service are, are more and more being looked upon and regarded as were the old crusaders of other days.

"With the cross of Jesus
Going on before."

A huge flaming cross emblematic of the cross of Christ, was erected in the large open space south of the city, at the side of which the Stars and Stripes floated as a large class of several hundred aliens were initiated; giving their allegiance to America, its ideals and principles, even their lives, if need be, to keep that flag from being dragged in the dust of dishonor.

It is events like this that make for true Americanism, that make loyal members of the order feel a justifiable pride in the great work and the great things already accomplished. The officers and members of the Klan are men of high standing and have the confidence of the entire membership.

People of the underworld fear the order and many have closed their places of business voluntarily, knowing that officers and others in authority are receiving the full support of the Klan, and its effectiveness is being felt throughout the entire country in a material way.

—o—

Morley Should Not Ought to Have Done It!

"FIRE! FIRE!" yelled the Denver Post and certain other yellow sheets when they found that Governor Morley had actually taken a much needed rest without first consulting those organs to ascertain if he might do so. Why, the very idea! Never before in the ken of man has a governor of this state made so bold as to even think of sleeping late some morning without first consulting the bosses to determine if they thought it best, much less actually dropping out of sight for a week and sleeping as late as he cared to. The Post was quite sure that the state would go to the dogs and advised said dogs to prepare for such a feast as never before. However, when the governor returned and there had been no fire and the state had not gone to the dogs, yet the Post with a sheepish sort of an expression said, "Well there could have been a fire for all we knew and we wanted to play safe and see the excitement too."

Institutions are often like the men who direct them and men are often like children. Children like to see the fire trucks go by,—they like excitement so once in a while we hear of a child